ACTION ALERT

I hope everyone is having a great Saturday and enjoyed some of those breaks of sunshine today! We have a main band of snow that will reach the Rockford area between 3-4am and arrive towards Chicago between 5-7am Sunday morning. This activity will potentially turn to some drizzle and flurries midday as the air temperatures are projected to be at or above 32 degrees. Currently we have a strong amount of deicing residual down on surfaces after this morning's cleanup efforts and this should hold off tomorrow mornings activities. Our two areas to watch are during the early morning hours and then the afternoon during the drizzle period, if ground temps don't draw upward and follow the air temperature some ice spots can occur and an additional deicing service will be needed. After the front passes through Sunday night temperatures are projected to get bitterly cold for Monday and Tuesday.

Our field managers will be out on site monitoring conditions during this activity period. All VIP Red Alert crews are "On Alert" and will begin servicing if conditions warrant. If you are in need of any snow related service issues please call our 24 hour snow emergency number at 847-344-1027.
