ACTION ALERT

Several heavy bands of snow came through during the morning hours dumping a range of 2-3" inches of snow for most areas except for down south towards Will County where they saw less. As stated in yesterday's alert, this is a long duration event and light snow is forecasted to continue until 12am-1am Monday morning. This is also when we are expecting some lake effect activity to kick in from 2am and not dissipate until midday Monday. Currently we are continuing to service all zero tolerance accounts and will have crews out again overnight to clean all properties before the start of Monday's workday.

All apartment/hotel locations your drive lanes, entrances/exits and fire lanes are all in the process of being plowed. Your "Day After Plow Clean Up" will occur midday Monday to clean parking spots as residents and guests leave for the day.

For all 2" and over Multifamily complexes; any properties that we are responsible for the plowing of your roadways we have already plowed or are just finishing opening these access roads. Even though the snow is not scheduled to stop until after midnight we have set our dispatched time for operators to begin work between the 8-10pm timeframe. This way we can get a good jump on driveways even though the activity might coat things over again.
